How to Secure a Higher Standard of Military Education Among Our Officers

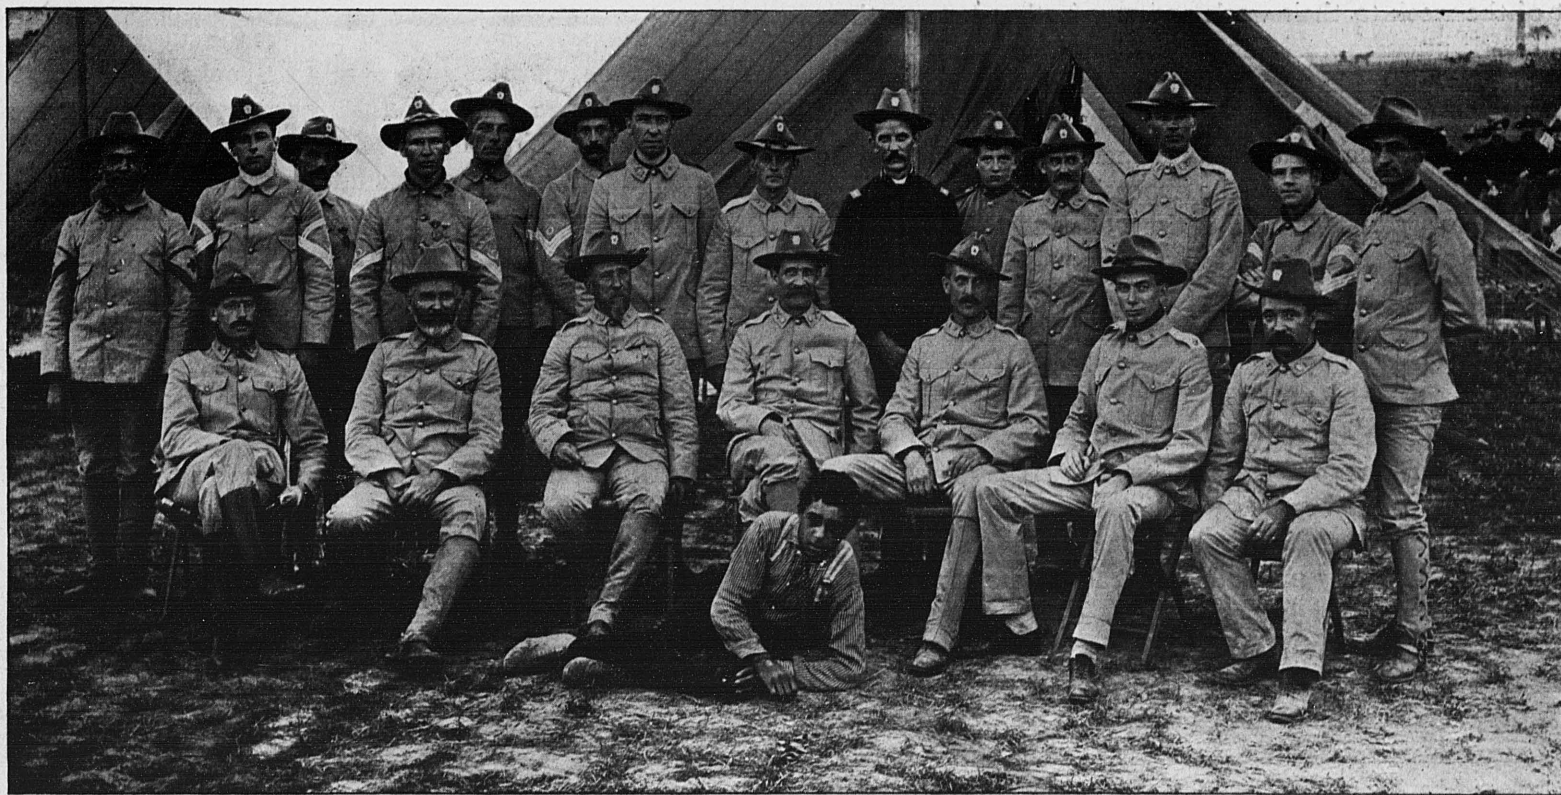

By Lieut. Colonel B. C. TILGHMAN, Jr., Third Infantry

NOTE—This article was written by Lieut. Colonel B. C. Tilghman, Jr., in December last and was intended to serve the same purpose for the National Guard of Pennsylvania as the article which subsequently appeared in the "Journal of the Military Service Institution of the United States."

THIS subject is upon the best practicable method of securing a higher standard of military education among our officers, the importance of which cannot be over estimated. The day has gone by when knowledge of the close order drill and ability to stand hard knocks and to give and take punishment without flinching were a satisfactory preparation for active service. Troops so led to-day could accomplish nothing and the greater their courage the sooner would they be destroyed with no increased chance of accomplishing this object. Yet, taken as a whole, is not this the condition in which our troops find themselves to-day? It may be urged that field maneuvers and practical minor tactics are impossible in our armories and in the few pitiful acres to which our encampments are confined. Even so, if

If then, this is to be our ideal, how are we to attain it? There is but one way. Every reform or improvement of this kind must begin at the top, and must be gradually forced downward until it permeates the whole mass. The education of the officers is the first step. The question remains what are we to be taught and how? What we are to be taught is fortunately settled for us. If the National Guard is ever to be of any practical use to the nation it will be in conjunction with the army, and therefore our officers must endeavor to qualify themselves in the same subjects as the officers of the army as thoroughly and with as few modifications as the conditions of the two services admit. What are these subjects? And how closely can we approximate to them?

The Government admits a boy to West Point. He is young; has not at all finished his education. It is not known in what branch of the practical work is impossible, the more need for familiarity with the theoretical part of it by the officers—if they would not become blind leaders of the blind—with the inevitable fate of such. The whole future of the National Guard is bound up in this question. It cannot continue to exist, in a satisfactory condition if every endeavor is not put forth to make it consist of troops—in the real sense of the word—inexperienced it may be—but having at least some knowledge of what will be required of them on service, even if not skilled in its performance.

The right to wear a uniform, copied by every boarding school, church brigade and irresponsible semi-military and social organization in the State, with the only prospect of active service in over-awing a lot of unorganized strikers, often with much right on their side if they would only refrain from violence—is not a sufficient foundation upon which to build a satisfactory State service. It can only be done if its ideal is preparation for actual war—as conducted to-day—with its police functions as a disagreeable possibility.

the service he will finally end—Engineers, Ordnance, Artillery, Cavalry or Infantry. The education given him is general in its scope, with a strong bias towards mathematics, natural sciences, physical culture and general military knowledge—such an education is an excellent thing—as good for a business man as a soldier, and other things being equal, would be desired by every one. It, however, takes four years of hard work to acquire, and most of it has no direct bearing upon the actual handling of troops. We, therefore, dismiss it from further consideration in the present connection.

The graduate of West Point, or the newly appointed officer from the ranks of civil life, is assigned to a command as Second Lieutenant. The Government, however, does not consider his education as finished—it is just begun. To be eligible for each of his subsequent promotions he must pass certain examinations to show his fitness for the commission to which he aspires. The subjects of these examinations, however, in contrast to those at West Point, are all exclusively and directly concerned with the actual business of war and the handling of troops. It is the professional education of the soldier in distinction from the general education of the youth received at West Point. It is these subjects which we must study and upon which we must acquire a knowledge in some degree comparable to that of the officers of the army, if we ever wish to make the National Guard of any use to the nation in conjunction with its regular forces.

No allusion is here made to the actual list of subjects composing the above so-called professional education, as it is not desired to complicate the present discussion as to whether each separate branch of study should or should not be included, and if so, how much of it should be required for each grade of the service. All will agree that we need some more professional education. The full army course can readily be referred to, and each officer can decide for himself what should be taught and the method of teaching will be now taken up. The National Guard officers, regarded as pupils in any proposed professional schools are a most peculiarly situated body of men. They are scattered all over the State, sometimes only then—all of different grades together—as in the single company towns, and from this up to the practical concentration of all the officers of a whole brigade in and about Philadelphia. Even here it is practically impossible to instruct in anything like a regular school on account of lack of time. An overwhelming majority of the officers are occupied in professional and commercial positions—some require more or less night work. As a rule, they already give an average of two nights out of the week to their work and any further calls on their time would work unwarrantable hardship upon them and probably result in the loss of valuable officers to the service. Also, the present state of their military education is highly incongruous, and if all the officers of the same grade of a regiment or brigade could be brought together in a class it would be impossible to teach them anything in a satisfactory manner. Either the well educated ones would be bored to death and doze in their chairs, feeling that their time was being wasted, while the rudiments were being forced into the uneducated or stupid ones, or these latter would sit in hopeless bewilderment, not understanding the instruction which was interesting the better educated and brighter officers.

The method of education adopted must therefore be sufficiently adaptable to be regardless of where the student was situated, or his educational standing at the beginning of his studies, and should turn them all out with at least a uniform minimum of qualifications at the end of his course. The only method that fulfills these conditions is that of the modern correspondence schools. These at present succeed in partially educating everybody who cares to pay the fees and has perseverance to finish the course—in almost every conceivable subject. A partial education is not so good as a complete one, but a partial military education is about as much as can be expected from any but professional soldiers, and, moreover, it is infinitely better than none whatever, which is our present required standard. This statement is made in view of the fact that the only subject touched on in examinations for a commission is drill regulations, and that usually in a most superficial manner, whereas in the United States Army examinations for promotion there are five subjects having as much, and one subject having more weight in the final result than the subject of drill regulations, and that these subjects are never even mentioned in our present examinations for commissions. The correspondence schools are operated briefly as follows: When a pupil enters a given course he is sent the first section of the first text-book of the course and a set of questions upon it. The first he studies. The second he sends answers to back to the school. These answers are corrected and returned to the pupil with other questions of the same nature as the first, if it is seen from the first answers that the subject is not thoroughly understood and with more advanced questions and new sections of text-book from time to time as the previous subjects are thoroughly well understood, and so on, until the whole course is finished, when some sort of diploma or certificate is issued. Thus all students pass through the whole course slowly or rapidly in proportion to intelligence, previous education and the amount of time devoted to it, and also that this time can be given at home or elsewhere and at such hours as are most convenient. The cost of such a course in a rather difficult branch, such as civil, mechanical or electrical engineering is about sixty dollars, and with diligent study will take a couple of years or so to get over.

It is assumed that a full military course could be given for a maximum of fifty dollars, and partial courses for proportionally less. This the State should certainly pay for, as it would receive the equivalent of the expenditure many times over in the efficiency of its troops.

The subjects of instruction and the means of imparting them having been indicated, it but remains to discuss the method of inaugurating such a system. It is a great mistake to inaugurate any reform, no matter how beneficial and urgently needed, suddenly and violently. We must remember that in the National Guard we have a very fair organization for all purposes except modern fighting, which it has never been taught. In our enthusiasm to teach it to fight under modern conditions we must take care not to destroy or in any way injure the valuable organization which we now possess.

We also have a new and in most respects most excellent military code of the State, which should not be lightly interfered with, and if possible, the above reform should be inaugurated in conformity with the terms thereof, so that executive action by the National Guard authorities would be alone required and legislative action would be unnecessary. The subjects of the course, then, having been decided upon, and the course and text-books duly prepared, and the course having been divided into four stages—that for second Lieutenants, First Lieutenants, Captains and Majors—the following method of putting the reform into execution is suggested:

It is suggested that an order be issued as follows: I. Declaring the course open free of expense to all commissioned officers of the Guard so far as demanded by their rank, and at the personal expense of any officer or enlisted man or civilian up to any grade. In this case, the money so expended to be refunded to him pro rata to the grade attained, should he at any subsequent time attain a commission or an increase in rank.

II. All officers at present in commission to be eligible to retain their present rank and to be re-elected thereto without reference to the terms of the order.

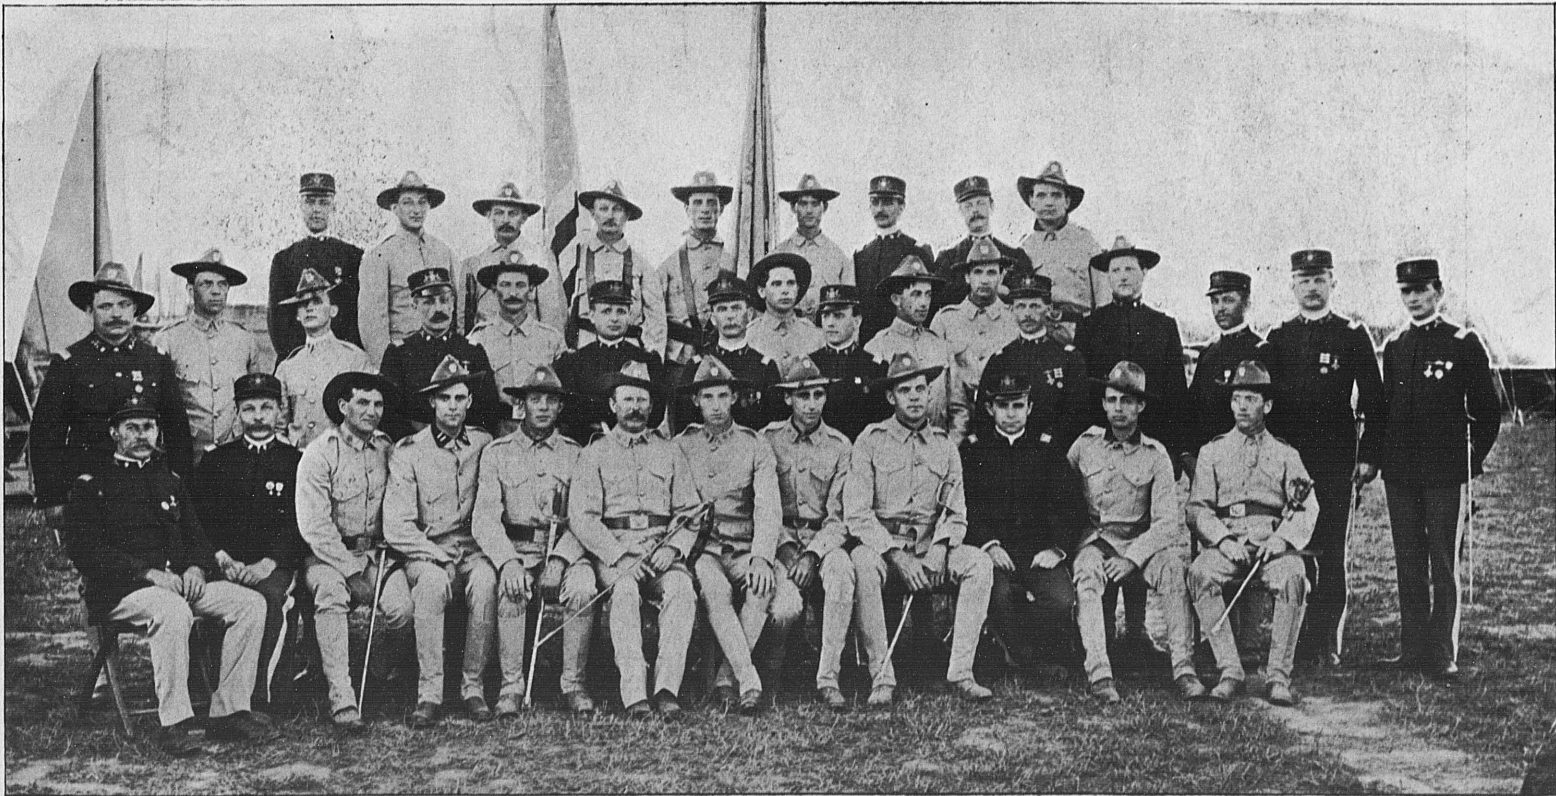

III. All future original elections and original appointments to commissions, from the ranks or from civil life, to be made just as at present, subject to examinations by the respective brigade boards and without reference to the terms of the order.

IV. Hereafter, no promotions in the Guard of officers already in commission, or re-elections or re-appointments of officers in future commissioned, to be made unless the officer so promoted, re-elected or re-appointed, has completed his course and obtained a certificate of proficiency in the grade that he had previously filled. Certificates of proficiency in grades in advance of that held by an officer to become valid upon his attaining the rank to which they are appropriate. Promotions to the Governor's Staff as Aides to be excepted from the above, but not to warrant commissions in other positions except when holding certificate of proficiency in the next lower grade thereto.

It is respectfully submitted that the above outlined plan could be put into operation by the executive authorities of the National Guard at once without any modification of the existing law whatever, and that its operation would in a few years more than double the actual fighting efficiency of the Guard. If this result were obtained it would be well worth the small expenditure it would entail and it would also largely increase the interest in the Guard and raise its standard of discipline, and in general increase all the good qualities always to be found in an efficient fighting force. The school proposed could either be organized as a branch of the Adjutant-General's Depart-

CAMP Meade is now a thing of the past. It was the grandest encampment the National Guard of Pennsylvania ever held; that is, more practical work was accomplished. It is to be regretted that the tour of duty only lasted a week. Many prominent officers are of the opinion that the Military Board should make provision for and extend the season of encampment to at least two weeks. In view of the extensive preparations made, it appears that a longer period would be more profitable to the State as well as the service.

AFTER a period of seventy years the time honored blue of the army is about to be discarded. Within a few months the dress uniform and the undress blouse will be made of a material manufactured solely for the United States Government. It is known as the "olive mix," being a combination of brown and medium green. It is contended by the authorities that this is not only a more serviceable shade, but brings about a distinctive material for our army that no other nation has. It is also stated on good authority that this is an advance step toward having the uniform of the United States Army and of the State forces properly respected. As pointed out in the "Journal" on several occasions, irresponsible, semi-military bodies have assimilated the official uniform and it is difficult for the general public to distinguish between the real soldier and the imitator. It is more than likely that the several States in due time will adopt the change, as the material can be drawn from the Federal Government upon requisition. It would not be surprising if Pennsylvania, with its usual progressiveness in matters military, would be one of the first to make use of the new standard.

COLONEL Dougherty, of the Ninth Infantry, is of the opinion that the next Spring inspection should be conducted by one official, preferably a U. S. officer, who would be detailed by the Federal Government for this purpose and temporarily placed on the staff of our Commander-in-Chief, with the rank and pay of a Lieutenant-Colonel. It would take about twenty weeks to accomplish this work, but far different ratings would be obtained and a great deal more satisfaction given to the regimental and company commanders. Colonel Dougherty feels that while we have a very able staff of inspectors, for business reasons, no one of them could find it convenient to inspect the entire Guard. It is also suggested in this connection that the line colonels and captains should receive but two week's notice of the inspection. Similar expressions have been made by other prominent officers in the State and it is earnestly hoped that the present system will be improved.

FOR a time recruiting in the anthracite coal regions was a difficult task, and many company commanders complained bitterly of the manner in which their efforts to secure new men were frustrated by malicious labor agitators, who, upon learning the name and occupation of an applicant for admission to the National Guard, would go to his employer and threaten boycott if the applicant was permitted to enlist. It was not long before the regimental commanders realized the importance of offsetting this scheme and they in turn visited the leading business men of this section who had sons eligible for membership and asked them whether they would prefer to have their sons serve in a sheriff's posse or wear the honorable uniform of the service of the State in the event of riot and insurrection. The result was that many of the best young men in the Wyoming and Lackawanna Valleys enrolled themselves in the several regiments, and in this way the captains secured a more desirable set of recruits than would have otherwise been obtainable.

Personal Mention

Captain Shannon (Company "C" Fourth Infantry) was personally complimented by Major Duval for having the finest all round company in the division.

The good hard work of the Fourth Infantry (Colonel C. T. O'Neill) was particularly mentioned among the higher officials at headquarters. It is almost a certainty that the "gallant Colonel" will in the near future command three battalions of four companies each.

Captain Kambeck (Company "B" Thirteenth Infantry) had the finest mess tent and kitchen at Camp Meade. In arrangement it surpassed the culinary departments in many of our noted city hostleries. It showed the work of an interested and painstaking cook and the members of the Company thoroughly appreciated his efforts.

Adjutant General Stewart proved himself a wonder at the encampment; notwithstanding his injured limb, he was indefatigable in the management of his department, and remarks of sympathy and admiration were heard on all sides. The General seems to be steadily improving and hopes to take a very active part in the National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, in which organization he is prominently mentioned for Commander-in-Chief.

"The London Express" of June 11th states that among the prominent American visitors who arrived that day at the English metropolis was Lieutenant Hugh Craig, Jr., of the First Troop, Philadelphia City Cavalry. This may have been a little joke on the part of some of the newspaper boys, who are all intimately acquainted with the Lieutenant. The fact is, that on the above mentioned date, Quartermaster Craig was at the First Regiment Rifle Range, Essington.

NOTES

"Our State Army & Navy" Journal will issue a special Coronation supplement, which will be replete with military views showing the different arms of service taking part in that ceremony.

The Honesdale Company of the Thirteenth Regiment made a strong impression upon the inspectors, and it is hinted that this company will be a close second to Easton.

While in conversation with some of the officers at Camp Meade, the Secretary of War suggested that the National Guard of Pennsylvania resembles the regulars as much as a member of a Swiss Alpine Club resembles a Swiss guide.

Owing to a misunderstanding on the part of the Lehigh Valley Railroad officials, the Thirteenth Regiment was delayed nearly six hours in reaching home. Colonel Louis A. Watres expressed much displeasure at this mismanagement.

As usual, Colonel Hulings' Sixteenth Regiment presented the finest regimental camp in the division. The sanitary condition was perfect, and was an eye-opener to the Regular Army officers, who made it a special point to go through this regiment. The two principal features were the systems of incineration and drainage.

On July 17th, Colonel Barnett's command entertained the Third Infantry. This was in the nature of a return for the many courtesies received when the "Fighting Tenth" stopped in Philadelphia as the guests of the "down-town organization" while en route to the Dewey celebration in New York City in the autumn of '98.

The Pittsburg Fourth of July celebration was a very successful affair, and the committee having the same in charge deserve a great deal of credit. The police regulations in particular should receive special mention. Prominent citizens as well as officers of the Tenth, Fourteenth, and Eighteenth Regiments were of the opinion that the committee should have arranged a service of ice water along the route of parade, especially as the march was a long one. This would have added materially to the comfort of the many paraders.

It was interesting to note the manner in which our cavalry arm worked at the encampment. The troops vied with each other to attain the best general efficiency, and this was particularly noticeable between Sheridan Troop and the Second Troop. The "mountaineers" say they are determined to show the "Quakers" that "there are others" and they propose to make a strong bid for first place next year.

ment, under some such name as Department of Military Education, etc., or it could be contracted for with any of the number of first-rate schools of the kind already existing in the country, some of which are in this State, and any of which would be glad to employ competent instructors, clerical force, etc., for such a course, if the certainty of the number of students, which our Guard alone would furnish, could be shown them. There is one more advantage on which I would touch lightly before concluding. One of the greatest—if not the greatest—aid to discipline is the respect of the subordinate for his superior. Respect cannot either be bought or obtained by Act of Legislature—defining rank and command—and yet do we not sometimes see officers in commission, whose knowledge of their duties cannot command the respect of their enlisted men? For they have no quality to claim it other than the commission, often based on a false personal popularity with the men, as Sheridan says when discussing this subject, "Made an officer because he is a good fellow, which is often just the reason why he should not be an officer."

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT ADDRESSING A GREAT CONCOURSE OF PEOPLE AT SHENLEY PARK, JULY FOURTH

If some such plan for insuring at least a minimum of professional education comparable to the commission held could be put in effect, each officer would have at least that claim on the respect of his men that comes from fitness to hold the position occupied.

EVERY TIME THE CLOCK STRIKES

Ye Olden Time Traveller Talks of Modern Improvements

"Talk of the difference in business trips," remarked a well-known business man last week. "Why, you youngsters have it fine now when you go to New York. When I commenced business I looked forward to the journey for some time, hating to stay away over night, which was a necessity in those days, and probably staid up half the night, so as to be sure and catch the train, leaving home way ahead of time for fear of having the wrong time table.

"Nowadays, I make up my mind to go to New York, and, looking at my watch to see how much time I have to reach the Reading Terminal, knowing that the Philadelphia & Reading's fast trains leave there every time the clock strikes, from 7 in the morning until 7 at night, start off at once, reach New York in a couple of hours, spend another two hours attending to business, strike the Jersey Central Station, Liberty St., on the hour, and starting home again, reach Philadelphia, having used up six hours time, or in reality only five, as instead of spending an hour at lunch, I got mine in the Buffet Parlor Car while making fast time between the two cities.

"I tell you what, the Philadelphia & Reading Railway seems determined to secure all the business travel between the two places. They reduced the time, put Buffet Parlor Cars on all trains running at hours when they were needed, hesitate at hardly anything that tends to insure the safety, comfort and pleasure of their passengers, and now comes their new departure, a train from each Terminal every time the clock strikes in business hours, scheduled on quick time, and the best part of all, keeping up to schedule."

The Rifle, Carbine and Revolver Matches

We extract the following from General Orders No. 30, issued from the Adjutant-General's Office, July 24, 1902:

I. The following circular is published for the information and guidance of the National Guard:

OFFICE OF THE GENERAL INSPECTOR OF RIFLE PRACTICE,
237 Fourth Ave., Pittsburg, July 19, 1902.

The annual rifle, carbine and revolver competitions for 1902 will be held upon the State range at Mt. Gretna, Pa., beginning August 18th, under the direction of the General Inspector of Rifle Practice.

Each regiment of infantry, the battalion of State Naval Militia, and each troop of cavalry shall be entitled to one team of four men and one man for reserve. Teams to be selected and detailed by the commanding officers of the several organizations. One commissioned officer will be allowed to shoot on each team.

Only the regulation U. S. Magazine rifle or carbine, caliber .30, and the regulation U. S. Army Colt or Smith & Wesson revolver, caliber .38, can be used.

Teams must arrive and go into camp upon the range Monday, August 18th. The range will be open and ready for practice on Tuesday, August 19th, at 8 A. M. Tents and mattresses will be provided, but officers and men must bring their own blankets and articles necessary for their individual comfort. Subsistence will be provided as heretofore, beginning on Monday, and per diem pay will be allowed for five days. The subsistence of commissioned officers will be charged against their pay. Transportation will be issued by regimental or brigade commanders and used only for officers and men on regular detail. No extra men shall be brought by any team. Blunt's rules shall govern the competitions. Elliptical bulls-eye targets will be used in all matches. Regimental Inspectors of Rifle Practice should attend with their teams, as the selection, training and coaching of their teams and supervision of them while in camp on the range is one of the most important of their duties. Weather permitting, two practice matches for both infantry and cavalry teams will be shot on Tuesday, August 19th, the regimental and cavalry matches on Wednesday, August 20th, the skirmish match and Inspector of Rifle Practice match on Thursday, August 21st, and the brigade match on Friday, August 22d. Officers desiring to enter the revolver match or the all-comers rifle match will have targets reserved for them on Wednesday and Thursday.

Regimental inspectors of rifle practice are urged to select men to practice for positions on their regimental teams as early as possible and to give the practice their personal supervision, so that each team may show an improvement in their shooting over past years.

One thousand rounds of ammunition will be issued without charge for team practice previous to the matches, for which requisition shall be made by regimental inspectors of rifle practice through Regimental Headquarters. The requisition must state that the ammunition is for team practice.

MEETING OF THE NATIONAL RIFLE ASSOCIATION, SEA GIRT, NEW JERSEY.

The thirtieth annual meeting of the National Rifle Association of America will be held at Sea Girt, New Jersey, August 30th to September 7th, 1902, inclusive. At this meeting the National Guard of Pennsylvania will be represented by the following teams:

One team of twelve men and three reserves, to be selected by the General Inspector of Rifle Practice.

One team, consisting of the Regimental Team which shall make the highest total score for the two practice matches, regimental match and the skirmish match at the annual competitions at Mount Gretna, to be augmented so as to consist of six men and one reserve. This team to represent the State of Pennsylvania in the Inter-State Regimental Match.

One team of six men and one reserve, to be selected from the several troops of cavalry of the National Guard of Pennsylvania, the selection to be made by the General Inspector of Rifle Practice, and this team to participate in the Squadron Matches.

Per diem pay will be allowed officers and enlisted men of the respective teams, including the reserves, and also such officers as may be detailed to accompany the teams.

Transportation will be provided.

Subsistence will be provided for the enlisted men.

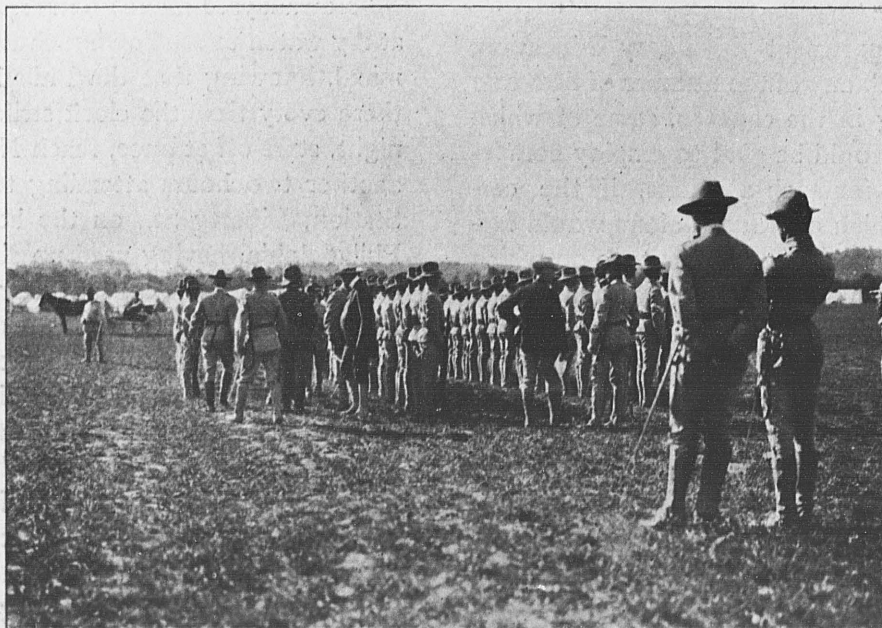

Officers provide their own subsistence, for which ample facilities will be afforded at Sea Girt.

The several teams will proceed from Mount Gretna to Sea Girt, N. J., at the close of the annual competitions at Mount Gretna.

Enlisted men will be furnished with tents and cots at Sea Girt. They will provide all articles necessary for their personal or individual comfort, including blankets.

GENERAL INFORMATION.

Officers not members of teams who desire to be present at Mt. Gretna to enter the revolver or all-comers match will be provided with quarters free of charge and will be furnished meals at the rate charged commissioned officers who are members of teams, provided they notify the General Inspector of Rifle Practice before August 14th of their intention to be present, but no transportation will be furnished or per diem pay allowed.
